Voluspa Jarpa's Syndemic is the winner of the inaugural edition of the 'Julius Baer Art Prize for Latin American Female Artists', a new biennial award initiated by Julius Baer and The Museum of Modern Art of Bogotá – MAMBO. It is the first of its kind to be held in Latin America, whose mission is to honor the research of outstanding Latin American female artists.

The term "syndemic" was introduced in the 1990s in medical anthropology to describe two or more sequential epidemics in a population with biological interactions, which exacerbate the prognosis and burden of disease.

Syndemic is Voluspa Jarpa's metaphor to analyze the violent social riots that occurred from October 2019 to March 2020 in Chile. For this exhibition, Jarpa invited collaborators—an astrophysicist, a mathematician, a Mapuche poet, a female witness, and a woman fighting in the frontline—to collect and share experiences about this phenomenon of protest, resistance, and rebellion against systematic Human Rights violations: torture, sexual violence, and other injustices.
